

THE OYEN NEWS

VOL. 20 No. 6

OYEN, ALBERTA. WEDNESDAY APRIL 5, 1933

PAGE ONE

CLASSIFIED ADS.

WANTED

SELL WATKINS PRODUCTS

Made in Western Canada
BE A WATKINS MAN. Earn from $35.00 to $50.00 a week from the start. Operate your own store on wheels. Over 150 Staple Food Products and Farm and Household necessities that are needed and used daily by thousands of Farm Homes of Western Canada. 64 Years Reputation. Ambitious and reliable men wanted right now to sell themselves up in business around Oyen—Youngstown—Chinook—Stamora.
For FREE BROCHURE, write The J. E. Watkins Co. Department 220, Winnipeg, Man.

WANTED—Out sheaves, suitable for feed. Please communicate with H. McDonald, Oyen.

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—Brume grass seed at 6c per pound; grade 2; germination 90 per cent. May be obtained at the east-half Sec. 20, Twp. 25, Rge. 5, or at Kerr's hardware store, Oyen. Claus Franzen. Hemsdale, P. O.

FOR SALE, DELIVERED OYEN—100 lb. large hand selected potatoes. Price 40c per bu. 150 lbs. choice hand picked Garden peas, 10c per bu. A quantity of garden corn a mixture of Golden Bantam and Improved Squash. Price per lb. 10c. One 35 lb. Bronze Gobler. $10.00
—A. E. Todd, Oyen

FOR SALE—Pure Banner oats suitable for seed, uncleaned price 20c. Harold Briggs, 2 miles S. E. of Bon-ton.

LOOK AT YOUR ADDRESS LABEL

About Town and Country

On Easter Sunday, special services will be held in Oyen United church at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. The morning service will include a baptismal service. Parents desiring to have children baptised are asked to communicate with Rev. E. F. Kemp, Oyen.

Mr. E. H. Church and son Howard, Mr. Jack McKenzie and Mr. G. S. Peck were Calgary stock show visitors, last week, returning to Oyen, Friday.

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. Erick of Sedalia, in Oyen on Sunday morning April 2, 1933, a son.

Mrs. M. G. Whitlock of Saskatoon, was a week-end visitor in Oyen.

Rev. E. F. Kemp has received word from the Home Mission Board of the United Church of Canada, that Mr. Donald Fraser, of Pine Hill Divinity Hall, Halifax, N. S., has been appointed to the Acadia Valley-Spring Valley charge, and it is expected that Mr. Fraser will conduct services on his new field on Sunday, April 23.

Mr. C. H. Langridge left last Sunday for Portage la Prairie, where he will visit at his home. His trip east is being made on account of the illness of his father.

Miss D. S. Dunford, a resident of Yokohama, Japan, who has been spending a holiday in England, and is now en route to the orient, is spending a few days in Oyen. She is a guest this week at the home of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. L. Dunford.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Dunford, Mrs. R. McLaren, Miss A. M. Todd, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Martin, Rev. and Mrs. E. F. Kemp, Miss Catharine Wright, Miss Ethel Leishman and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Rora, back, were Youngstown visitors last Friday night, to see the play "Safety First" which was presented under the auspices of the United Church in Youngstown.

Mr. W. Caswell of Calgary was a week-end visitor in Oyen.

The death of A. M. Orr occurred in Oyen this morning. The burial will take place tomorrow.

Excel Items

Mr. Ray Anderson and daughter Gwyneth, and Mrs. J. R. Anderson left last Sunday by car for Calgary, where they will spend a few days.

The card party and dance in Excel school was a real success. Everyone who attended report having a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Barker returned home from Sedalia, where they have been for the last week.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Gullekson were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Golden.

Miss M. Wiley spent the week end visiting Miss Ina Anderson.

Mr. F. Thayer, who recently purchased the White farm, is hauling equipment on to the place.

Alberta School Statistics

A total of 3,305 school districts with 5,720 rooms, were in operation in 1932 according to the annual statistical report of the provincial department of education. The total enrolment in these schools was 170,705 there were 5,844 teachers employed. The enrolment in the 50 city and town schools was 56,741, while in 17 separate schools there were 5,831 pupils and 42,043 in other graded schools. In five consolidated school there were 7,103 pupils. The record of attendance for all schools was 90.92% of the monthly enrolment. The average number of days for which the schools kept open was 195 while 96.7% of the schools kept open for more than 160 days. The interesting feature of the report is the fact that since 1912 the percentage of pupils in grades 7 to 12 has increased from 14.65% to 32.42%.

Course in Placer Mining

The keen interest developed recently in placer mining in the provinces led provincial school of technology at Calgary last June to put on a special two weeks' course in placer mining technique. The result was that 129 persons enrolled. The course is to be repeated this spring for three weeks, from April 24 to May 12. Lectures and laboratory demonstrations will be shown.

To Represent Alberta

Elimination contests for the selection of grain judging teams which will represent the young farmers of Alberta at the World's Grain Congress at Regina in July have been completed under the auspices of the field crops branch of the provincial department of agriculture. The team which will compete in the inter college competition and which has been selected from students and ex-students of the schools of Agriculture and Agricultural College, will be taken from the following five men, the team consists of three and one alternate: Messrs J. L. Bolton, R. M. Putnam, E. E. Swindlehurst, R. Hansen, A. W. Pratt, all of whom are at present attending the agricultural college. The team to participate in the intermediate competition, to consist of three and an alternate, will be selected from the following: Wayne Strange, Claresholm; Donald McFadden, Lacombe; Arthur Chelte, Rainier; Herbert Cripps, Olive; Douglas Brisee, Ponoka; Wallace Watson, Provost; and Geo. Rossman, Wetaskiwin. The team to represent the junior or grain clubs of the province also to consist of three and an alternate, will be taken from the following: Gordon Ballion, Wetaskiwin; Wes Douglas, Lacombe; Paul Billwiler, Hanna; Geo. Darrook, Lacombe. It is hoped to be able to arrange for a short period of training for these teams at the Old School of Agriculture prior to going to Regina where they will compete against teams from the provinces of Canada and other countries.

READ THE ADS.

Subscribers

Are asked to look at the address label on their paper. If your subscription is in arrears, the label will show date of expiration. Payment of arrears will be appreciated.

OYEN NEWS

FREE:-

Subscribers calling at the office of the Oyen News will be given a free copy of "The Veterinarian".

ADVERTISING

will pay good dividends. Use space each week in the columns of

The Oyen News

CHECK UP

Your printed stationery requirements . . . Letterheads, Envelopes, Statements, Loose Leaf Forms etc., and leave your order at

The Oyen News Office

OYEN THEATRE

Friday and Saturday April 7-8

JANET GAYNOR

and

CHARLES FARRELL

in

DELICIOUS

The same team but better than "Merely Mary Ann"

Show starts 8.30 sharp

NEXT WEEK

WILL ROGERS

in

"Business & Pleasure"

DANCE

EASTER MONDAY

Gents 50c Extra Lady 25c

ORCHESTRA

Mr. McMillan, Frank Reid, Jack Snyder, Art Home, Ted Mounth and Victor Thygesen.

Dial's Auction Sales

Thursday, April 7—Farmstock harness, machinery etc., on Sec. 4, Township 29, Range 4 (seven miles north and one and one-half miles west of Oyen). Sale to commence at 12 noon, lunch served. (This is part of the White estate).

Friday, April 7—13 head of horses, some holstein cows, harness, machinery etc., at the farm of Mr. Fred Pope, Section 9, Township 29, Range 3. (Ten miles south and four and one-half miles east of Oyen). Sale to commence at 1 o'clock, lunch served.

Go to Church SUNDAY

Church Notices

SUNDAY, APRIL 9

OYEN UNITED CHURCH

EXCEL..... 11.00 a.m.

SUPERIOR..... 2.30 p.m.

OYEN..... 7.30 p.m.

SUNDAY SCHOOL 11.00 a.m.

Rev. E. F. KEMP

All Are Cordially Invited

ALL SAINTS CHURCH

SUNDAY SCHOOL 2.00 p.m.

Evening..... 7.30 p.m.

Rev. C. M. K. Parsons

Vicar.

Professional Cards

Dr. D. L. Dick

Physician and Surgeon

Office on First Avenue East

Phone No. 7

Oyen - Alta.

Miss Lillian Reinhold

M.T.C.M.

(Tyne Mount Royal College)

PIANOFORTE LESSONS

Preparation for Toronto Conservatory of Music examinations.

Studio on Main street, Oyen

Four doors south of Second avenue,

(West side)

Box 37, Oyen, Alberta.

WORLD ECONOMY WILL CONFERENCE MAY SOON BE HELD

London, Eng.—Aspects of a "new deal" for the world became evident here in conferences between Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Norman H. Davis, United States ambassador-at-large.

They have as their objective conferring a world economic conference as soon as possible and breaking the stranglehold which is suffocating world trade.

Both agree the sooner the conference is held, the better. They proceeded with a preliminary exchange of views, the first of which was a decision that only two weeks' notice need be given the participating nations, instead of three months, making the beginning of the conference possible for late in May.

Their talks were confined to the economic conference. Disarmament and debts were not discussed.

Mr. Davis said the conference does not depend on settlement of either debts or disarmament, and he would discuss the British debt payment due the United States on June 15. He intimated, however, that the new congress was largely elected on the understanding that there would be no cancellation, reduction or postponement of the war debts.

He is proceeding on the assumption the economic conference will be held in London, and does not know whether a preliminary British mission, possibly headed by Mr. MacDonald, will go Washington.

Study Authority Given Parliament At Ottawa

Law Officers Looking Into New Rights Under Statute Of Westminster

Ottawa, Ont.—Law officers of the crown are studying the new authority given to the Canadian parliament as a consequence of the Statute of Westminster. Hon. Hugh Cuthbert, Minister of Justice, told the House of Commons. It was expected a bill with a number of clauses embodying the territorial and other rights given to parliament would be brought down this session. In the measure would probably be included a provision abolishing appeals to the judicial committee of the privy council in England in criminal cases.

Quits Germany

Prof. Einstein Takes Steps To Renounce Prussian Citizenship

Berlin, Germany.—As direct-action repressive measures by Chancellor Adolf Hitler's Nazis go under way against Jews in many parts of Germany as a prelude to the nationwide anti-Jewish boycott, it was learned Prof. Albert Einstein has taken steps to renounce his Prussian citizenship. Prof. Einstein, a Jew, became a citizen in 1914 when he accepted a position with the Prussian Academy of Sciences. Upon landing at Brussels after his recent trip to the United States, he wrote to the German consulate there for information about the steps necessary to end his citizenship. He pointed out he formerly was Swiss.

Anti-German Boycott

Reaction In France Regarding Anti-Semitic Demonstrations

Paris, France.—The start of a French anti-German boycott appeared with some merchants displaying signs saying "German silkenware will not be received." French Jews were organizing mass meetings in protest against alleged anti-Semitic atrocities in Germany.

The feeling in France against Germany when an audience in Marseilles viewed a manifestation of hostility toward Emil Ludwig, the noted biographer, after the chairman of the meeting declared Ludwig was an exile from Germany. The audience had protested violently because of the author's criticism of military features of the Versailles peace treaty.

Left $50,000 Estate

Ottawa, Ont.—An estate valued at $50,000 was disposed of under the will of H. H. P. A. Anglin, former chief justice of Canada, entered for probate here. Consisting of $28,000 insurance and the balance chiefly in real estate, it is left to the widow. The residue remaining after her death is to be divided among three children.

Resentment In Russia

Soviets Object To Attitude Of Britain

In Scheidt, Charge
Moscow, Russia.—Foreign Communists have inferentially accused the United Kingdom of attempting "British diplomatic pressure" in connection with British subjects arrested in sabotage charges involving the operations of the British-Metropolitan Vickers Electrical Company, an official communiqué revealed.

The communiqué told of a call made by Sir Edmund Ovey, the British ambassador, at the foreign office yesterday "to acquaint the foreign minister with the steps the British Government intends to take if the Soviet Government plans to trial several British subjects charged with sabotage."

Mr. Litvinoff did not wait for the ambassador to explain the measure contemplated, the communiqué said. Instead he told the ambassador that the government's decision to try the case "cannot be changed, and if the British Government intends to inflict this decision, it is informing us of its intended measure. Then the ambassador may rest assured that nothing will come of it."

The foreign minister remarked that "matters such as attempted harsh diplomacy pressure from the outside might be successful in Mexico, but in the Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics they are doomed to failure beforehand."

Sir Edmund formerly served as Britain's diplomatic representative at Mexico City.

"After the foreign minister had made the statement, the ambassador did not insist on explaining the British measures."

It is understood the action contemplated by the British government consists of an embargo against Soviet goods.

Guarding Airplane Wreck

Armed Police Protect Remains Of

London, Eng.—Britain has been shocked by the air disaster which snuffed out the lives of 15 persons who were aboard the British Imperial Airways tri-motored plane, "City of Liverpool," when it crashed near Edinburgh. A twisted mass of wreckage was the condition of 13 of the passengers who had met instant death as the great plane caught fire and fell to the earth like a spent rocket. Two more bodies were found in the vicinity but were mutilated beyond recognition. Two victims had evidently attempted to jump free of the plane.

Belgian air industry officials are expected to conduct investigations to the catastrophe. Meanwhile a cordon of armed police are on guard around the remains of the once proud "City of Liverpool," that was carried from Cologne, Germany, to Croydon, England, via Brussels, Belgium.

London, Eng.—Officials of the Imperial Airways confessed themselves at a loss to explain the catastrophe involving the crash of their air liner, "City of Liverpool," in Belgium with the loss of 15 lives.

Assist Horse Breeders

Policy of Government In This Connection To Be Continued

Ottawa, Ont.—The policy of providing assistance to horse breeders in the prairie provinces is to be continued this year with adjustments to the advantage of the breeders. It was announced by Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture.

The date of application is brought forward to June 1, and a promoter to whom the clubs and breeders should apply for information has been appointed in each of the prairie provinces.

The promoters appointed are: Carl Roberts, Osborne, Man.; J. W. Durne, Calgary, Alberta; Lt.-Col. H. W. Arnold, Saskatoon, for North Saskatchewan; and Dr. Charles Head, Regina, for South Saskatchewan.

France Lost Business

Paris, France.—France lost 4,000,000 francs in trade with the United States as a result of defaulting on the $10,000,000 debt installment due last December, former Senator Gabriel Tuftin told a meeting of business men and others called on behalf of the campaign to pay United States.

Bill Passes Senate

Ottawa, Ont.—The bill authorizing the holding of hospital sweepstakes in Canada has been passed by the senate and is now in the hands of the house. The measure was sponsored by Senator A. D. McRae (Cons., Vancouver).

SUGGEST SOME CHANGES IN OUR VOTING SYSTEM

Ottawa, Ont.—Radical suggestions for changes in Canada's electoral system were advanced in the senate today coupled with a few caustic remarks on the workings of democracy as at present organized.

As a cure for the present high cost of elections, Senator C. W. Robinson of Montreal, himself a veteran of many electoral battles, suggested total abolition of election booths, elimination of registration and the taking of votes by a house-to-house canvass. In his opinion it would save millions of dollars.

"The opinion of half the electors is not any good anyway," said Senator George Lynch-Staunton of Hamilton, as he agreed with the proposed abolition of registration which cost more than $1,000,000 at each election. "Take 100,000 young girls voting," said Senator Lynch-Staunton, "their collective opinion would be of great value to any government, wouldn't it?"

The House of Commons might as well be abolished and the entire cost of elections eliminated, remarked Senator C. E. Tanner of Pictou, N.S. The country would not be in its present financial difficulty if there had been no commons and the senate alone had dealt with legislation in the last 10 years.

The discussion took place on Senator W. E. Foster's resolution favoring an inquiry into methods of improving the electoral system. Senator Tanner adjourned the debate and the discussion will continue later in the week.

Senator Lynch-Staunton thought the machinery of government in Canada was far too cumbersome. There were Dominion, provincial and municipal elections. There was no reason why Dominion candidates were elected once every five years, why aldermen would not also be elected for five years instead of a single year. Canada had more governments than any other country and more elections.

Miner May Shut Down
Victoria, B.C.—A strike was called here that the Crown's Nest Pass Coal Company would cease operations of the coal mines of Fernie, in southern British Columbia, main support of a population of 5,000 people. Thomas Uphill, labor member from Fernie, has given notice that he will ask the legislature that the mines be turned over to inter-city which will operate them.

Counterfeits have been flooding Scotland with bogus bank notes.

THE NATIONAL ENTRY WHICH SCORED

Here we see Kellogg's Jack clearing a jump at the National Hunt Club aces week before the Grand National at Aintree. Kellogg's Jack provided the surprise of the year by winning the coveted Grand National from a field of famous jumpers.

ENVOY TO MEXICO

Joseph Daniels, war-time Secretary of the Navy under President Wilson, who has been nominated by President Roosevelt as U.S. Ambassador to Mexico. Nomination by the President is tantamount to appointment.

British Officers Kidnapped

Chinese Pirates Seize Four Officers From British Ship

Newchang, Manchuria.—A group of armed Chinese buccanniers kidnapped four British officers from the British merchantman, "Nanchang," which was anchored at the Newchang bar.

The captain of the steamer pursued the pirates, frantically wirelessing an alarm, but the abductors escaped in their junks in the shallow water.

They had swarmed aboard the steamer from three junks, which opened up heavy fire as they drew alongside. British gunboats began an immediate search for the pirates and the victims.

They were W. E. Hargrave, A. D. Bluff, F. L. Pears and Charles Johnson.

To Investigate Finances

Federal Government May Set Official To Western Provinces

Ottawa, Ont.—Before acceding to the request of the western provinces for financial assistance the Bennett Government has decided to carry out an investigation into their affairs. For this purpose, Walter Selser, federal comptroller of the treasury and assistant deputy minister of finance, left Ottawa, March 28.

Selser will be observed with respect to his mission and it is somewhat uncertain if Mr. Selser will go direct to Victoria and work east, or begin at Winnipeg and work west.

Fire In Dublin

Blaze Believed By Authorities To Be Of incendiary Origin

Dublin, Irish Free State.—Fire, believed by authorities to be of incendiary origin, swept Connolly House, headquarters of the Communist Irish revolutionary workers group, and a block of buildings nearby in Bachelors' Walk.

First-estimate said the damage might be enormous. Several stores and other adjoining properties were badly burned.

The blaze in Bachelors' Walk, which runs off O'Connell street at O'Connell bridge, was under control at midnight.

Many persons were injured in fighting at Connolly House, which is about 100 yards from Bachelors' Walk. Several hundred men stormed the Communist headquarters. They threw stones and broke windows, forced their way through the entrance and seized a red flag, pamphlets and furniture which they threw into the street.

The flag and the pamphlets were being in a demonstration outside the building. Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings. Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Fire In Dublin

Blaze Believed By Authorities To Be Of incendiary Origin

Dublin, Irish Free State.—Fire, believed by authorities to be of incendiary origin, swept Connolly House, headquarters of the Communist Irish revolutionary workers group, and a block of buildings nearby in Bachelors' Walk.

First-estimate said the damage might be enormous. Several stores and other adjoining properties were badly burned.

The blaze in Bachelors' Walk, which runs off O'Connell street at O'Connell bridge, was under control at midnight.

Many persons were injured in fighting at Connolly House, which is about 100 yards from Bachelors' Walk. Several hundred men stormed the Communist headquarters. They threw stones and broke windows, forced their way through the entrance and seized a red flag, pamphlets and furniture which they threw into the street.

The flag and the pamphlets were being in a demonstration outside the building. Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

Police repeatedly charged into the crowd, but the disturbance lasted hours past midnight.

Connolly House was attacked by hundreds of young men Sunday and Monday nights in the course of Communist meetings.

Thousands of people watched from street fighting tonight's blaze which was one of the biggest and most dangerous Dublin ever experienced.

BRITISH ENVOY IS RECALLED FROM RUSSIA

London, Eng.—Sir Edmund Ovey, ambassador at Moscow, has been called home to report in person on the arrest of six British subjects employed by the Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical Company, charged with sabotage at the Russian Government.

Newspapers which regard the incident as of considerable importance to relations between the two governments speculated on the possibility of a ban on Russian imports, cancellation of negotiations for a new trade treaty with Russia, and perhaps of a severance of diplomatic relations.

Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, was questioned in the House of Commons as to whether he intended to commit himself on the government's attitude.

The six men accused are: Alan Monkhouse, director in Moscow for Metropolitan-Vickers; John G. Abbott, W. H. Thornton, W. H. McDonald, John Cusby and another technical name Gregory.

Monkhouse and Nordwell are at liberty.

Moscow, Russia.—British embassy announced Ambassador Sir Edmund Ovey had been called to London to report on the arrest of several British subjects employed by the Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical Company.

It was said an excellent authority he is not likely to come back, and this probably will add to the complications which began with raids on the company's offices and the filing of sabotage charges against several technicians.

Virtually the entire diplomatic corps was present to see off Sir Edmund and his family when they took train for Berlin, but the foreign office was not represented.

Old Age Pensions

Alberta Will Not Relieve Municipalities From Paying Share Of Cost

Calgary, Alberta.—There will be no relief to municipalities regarding old age pension payments, Premier J. E. Brown has been informed. Mayor Andy Davison, of Calgary, had requested the province to relieve the city of the 70 per cent payment of the pensions.

Mayor Davison told the stand the municipalities should be relieved of their share in the pension costs now that the Dominion Government had assumed 75 per cent of the cost, leaving the provincial governments to pay only 15 per cent. He thought the provincial government should take over the municipalities' 10 per cent share.

May Spread Tax Payment

Proposed Bill Would Further Relieve Debtors In Alberta

Edmonton, Alberta.—Designed to further relieve debtors by spreading payment of tax arrears over a six-year period, a bill will be introduced in the Alberta legislature shortly. The bill provides for the consolidation of payment of all instalments of certain local taxes.

The Alberta bill provides that when a taxpayer is in arrears for more than one year in respect of land taxes due the municipality, or for school taxes, he may enter into a consolidation agreement whereby the arrears would be paid by instalments over a period of six years.

Favors the Dole

Direct Relief To Most Economical Plan, Says Senator

Ottawa, Ont.—Cost of providing work had been found to be out of proportion to the cost of direct relief, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, government leader in the senate, told the members of the Upper Chamber. The relief measure recently passed by the Commons was under review.

Public buildings, Senator Meighen said, had been erected to meet present and future needs. No feasible means of giving work to the extent of the present unemployment had been devised. The measure was passed without amendment.

Soviets Daily Reports

Moscow, Russia.—Although there has been a serious food shortage for some time in many regions of Soviet Russia, reports quitters a permit, denied Thursday reports published abroad the nation is suffering from famine. A statement thousands were dying of starvation was branded as "sensational."

Two giant air-liners have been ordered for the London-Paris route, and they are expected to be ready for service next September. Each will have four 630 horse-power engines and will seat 40 passengers and carry a payload of nearly four tons.

WORLD HAPPENINGS
BRIEFLY TOLD

The famous international horse show in London, has been abandoned for this year.

A record, probably without parallel in the Dominion, is one held by Quebec, Ontario, where not a single motor fatality occurred within the city limits during 1932.

Employing 45 men, camp No. 6, owned by P. Bain, logging operator of Dewdney, B.C., has re-opened. The mill and camp, closed since November, will cut for export.

Alexander Bangerter, who once homesteaded a quarter section of land, in what is now the heart of Winnipeg, is dead at New Westminster, B.C., aged 80.

W. A. Crawford-Ross of Nanton, Alberta, was re-elected president of the Alberta Herd Breeders' Association at the annual meeting in association at the annual meeting at Calgary.

Major W. H. Gladstone Murray, M.C., prominent official of the Canadian Broadcasting Company, has arrived in Ottawa to begin his temporary duties as advisor to the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission.

Construction of a $475,000 oil refinery in Calgary is planned by Federal Oil Consumers, Ltd., Harold J. Maloney, chairman of the board of trustees states. The plant's capacity would be 250 barrels a day.

Alberta's legislature has adopted a motion presented by Premier J. E. Brown, urging the Government to call on as soon as possible a conference to discuss changes in the British North American Act.

England will probably not be represented at the Canadian Biscuit on Connaught ranges, Ottawa, this August. Lord Cottesloe, president of the National Biscuit Association, "afraid financial conditions would prevent" the sending of an English team.

Statement Is Denied

Stefansson Says Eyes Do Not Change Color During Arctic Night

Brown eyes do not turn blue during the long nights of the polar region, according to Dr. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, noted Arctic explorer. Stefansson quotes him as replying, in a conversation with the editor of Science, the statement made in another magazine that "after a prolonged absence of sunlight, men on polar expedition find that their eyes, irrespective of previous color, have turned blue."

Dr. Stefansson, in all his long experience in the lands of long nights could not recall having observed this phenomenon. The statement was alleged to have been inspired by an entry in the Journal of Captain Scott, British explorer who perished after having reached the South Pole. Inquiry addressed to Captain Scott's companions and collaborators not only failed to bring confirmation of this report but brought forth statements to the opposite effect. Dark-eyed men see the sun return at the end of a polar night with eyes that are still dark.

Halifax Had Freak Winter

Lowest Temperature Recorded Was Seven Degrees Above Zero

Yachting on the harbor was not the only unusual incident of this freak winter in Halifax. For the first time since weather records were first begun in the city, about 60 years ago, the mercury failed to drop to zero during the months of December, January and February.

Mean temperature during February was 29.3 degrees, or nearly six degrees higher than the no-melting 23.69 established during the last 20 years, according to figures compiled by Frederick R. Homan Dominion meteorologist here.

The coldest day of the winter was Feb. 21, when the temperature was seven degrees above zero.

Absence of snow was another unusual feature of the winter. For instance, the total of snow and rain combined in February was 5.31 inches. During the same month last year the total was 17 inches.

U.S. Leads in Apple Production

Apple orchards of the world are estimated at 7,140,000 acres, with a yearly production of 550,000,000 bushels. Canada supplies only 2.4 per cent. of the total, the United States being in the lead with 35 per cent.

Braconia trees have three distinct leaf forms and all three may often be found on the same twig.

W. N. U. 1936

Expensive Economy

Shipping On Advertising Has Always Always Been Poor Business

Henry C. Lytton, a veteran Chicago merchant, is quoted as observing that 1932 is of all years a year in which business men should make full use of advertising. And he speaks of what he knows.

Forty six years ago Mr. Lytton launched his business. He had, as he points out, just $12,000 capital, but he did not hesitate to spend between $3,500 and $4,000 of it on newspaper advertising before he even opened his doors.

His business recently was valued at approximately $7,000,000.

As a testimonial to the work that a wise advertising program can do for a business his experience speaks volumes. Shipping on the advertising appropriation can be false economy of the most expensive kind.

Japan Buys Canadian Nickel

To Be Used In Mining New Small Cabbage

The finance ministry recently bought from the International Nickel Company of Canada several hundred tons of nickel for the purpose of mining new small cabbage to replace the present five and ten-cent pieces of nickel and copper alloy. The sale is 1,100 of the yen, which is equivalent to about 22 cents.

Officials of the finance and war ministries denied any knowledge of a plan to convert the present coins into bullion.

By Ruth Rogers

Winnipeg Newspaper Union

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

By Ruth Rogers

TO TOUR CANADA

R. W. V. Robins, famous Middlesex spin bowler, who will be a member of the English cricket team which will tour Canada, the United States and the West Indies this year.

Broadcasting Not New

Had Its Origin In Halifax, Over Thirty Years Ago

If you think broadcasting is something new, read this from the Halifax Herald: "Broadcasting, considered new within the last few years, had its origin in Halifax more than 30 years ago, when the unusual experiment was made in the local academy of music. The Herby Opera Company was playing there. Crichton Mitchell, now of Wolfville, then an employee of the Nova Scotia Telephone Company, rigged a large funnel over the stage, placed a telephone microphone in the mouth of the funnel, and carried the program over telephone wires to the telephone company's building, where it was enjoyed by all the staff."

Managing a Crowd

England's Police Know How To Quell Disorder Without Violence

Over in England as we have repeatedly pointed out the police are carries no fire-arms, but only the policeman's baton. Yet when a great crowd of over a hundred thousand assembled in London, and there was disorder and some violence, it was reduced to order and not a shot was fired and not a man was killed. There were no machine-guns, there was no use of revolvers, and nobody's sword off-shoot, and nobody's blood lay at any man's door. England can still show us something in the management of crowds and in the care of human life.—Halifax Chronicle.

Much Gold Hoarded

More than $1,000,000,000 in gold has been hoarded throughout the world in the last eighteen months, League gold experts estimated. Every month, League statisticians report, several million more dollars in gold has disappeared from world circulation. The hoarding movement started late in 1931, soon after England went off the gold standard.

Some people recommend brandy for seasickness, but the sure cure is port.

Sweden has increased its appropriation for the electrification of State Railways.

BRITAIN'S ABSENT-MINDED PASSENGERS

Field Marshal Sir William Robertson, who died Feb. 12, left an estate of £49,000, about $200,000 at present rate of exchange. Noted in the list of bequests were gifts of all his swords and medals and decorations to his son for life. On his son's death these are to follow the harp.

It is hard to believe, but these umbrellas are just a few of the vast number of articles left by forgetful travellers in the Mother Country in trains and stations. These unclaimed articles, ranging from smoking pipes to spades in half-dozen lots, are sold at regular periods by the British railway companies.

Makes Dramatic Story

American Money Helped King Of Greece To Escape

Ex-King George of Greece has the upright carriage, the high, bold forehead, and the unaffected bearing of his father, the late King Constantine. Although he is well off, he probably prefers his present mode of life to the disturbed existence which ended in his banishment nearly 31 years ago. He required for only 18 months, and during that time tension between Greece and Italy was at its height. It was broken by Mussolini's famous bombardment of Corfu, which resulted in the proclamation of a republic. How the King and Queen escaped from the royal palace on that occasion makes a dramatic story. Some months previously Mrs. Gary, wife of Judge Gary, the American millionaire, was entertained by the Queen in the hot season, and was surprised to find the palace awarming with flies. She promised to send the Queen some anti-fly curtains from America, but finding it difficult to get them through, sent a cheque for $5,000 dollars instead, so that the curtains could be bought. In Europe, the money arrived the day before the revolution, and it was only by its aid that the King and Queen were able to bring their way out of the country.

Recipes For This Week

(By Betty Barmby)

CHOCOLATE JUNKET WITH CHOPPED NUTS AND WHIPPED CREAM

4 tablespoons powder for orange junket.
1 pint milk.
1 cup whipping cream.
1 cup sugar.
Chopped walnuts.
Green maraschino cherries.

Make chocolate junket according to directions on package. Chill in refrigerator. When ready to serve, whip cream and add sugar, mixing well. Place on plates of junket, sprinkle with chopped nuts over it. A green maraschino cherry adds color to the topping.

CAROLINE FRITTERS

To three-fourths cup canned corn, add one-half cup milk, two well-beaten eggs, and one-half tablespoon sugar. Mix thoroughly. Mix one scant cup flour, one tablespoon baking powder and one-half teaspoon salt. Sift and combine with the other mixture. Place buttered muffin rings in a buttered dripping pan. Drop the combined mixtures into the rings, and bake in a moderate oven.

Left Large Estate

Field Marshal Sir William Robertson, who died Feb. 12, left an estate of £49,000, about $200,000 at present rate of exchange. Noted in the list of bequests were gifts of all his swords and medals and decorations to his son for life. On his son's death these are to follow the harp.

Canadian Farm Poverty

The total value of all descriptions of farm property in Canada in 1932 is officially estimated at $34,735,000 as compared with $43,138,000 in the previous year.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

APRIL 9

JESUS REQUIRES CONFESION AND LOYALTY

Golden Text: "If any man would come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me."—Mark 8:34.
Lesson: Mark 8:34-41
Devotional Reading: Romans 8:31-38.

Explanations and Comments

Cross-Bearing the Duty Of All, verses 34-38.—"The Twelve had learned to regard Him as the Messiah; it was as much as they ever could learn till the further lesson was brought home to them in practical form by the cross. There was no more need for privacy. Jesus could start on that last journey to Jerusalem which was to end on Calvary. The first sign of this is the deliberate change in His method: it is hardly possible that the next step was taken without an interval. Jesus was alone with His disciples, apparently, when the great counsel was made. In the next verses He is at least within call of the Twelve. The proximity of the two phrases is intended, one would judge, to imply that the new departure was made. In the next verses Jesus lays down the simple rules which form the basis of His ethics. In fact, there may be said to be only one rule—that of self-denial."—H. Robinson.

"If any man would come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me." Denying one's self does not mean the giving up of one's life, but the giving up of self, the yielding of one's will to Christ's will.

For whosoever would save his life shall lose it; this sounds paradoxical. Jesus was to consider that He was speaking of two kinds of life, the higher life and the lower life. He who would save his higher life of the spirit must deny his lower life. Whosoever would save his lower life, My sake and the gospel's shall save his higher life. The saying has been paraphrased thus: "Whosoever shall make it his first business to save or preserve his natural life, his worldly well-being, shall lose the higher life, the life indeed; and whosoever is willing to lose his natural life, for My sake, shall find the true eternal life."

Wins U.S. Science Prize

Young Canadian Awarded $1,000 By American Chemical Society

Frank H. Spedding, Ph.D., a 30-year-old scientist, and a native of Hamilton, Ont., who has been in the new method of seeing into the invisible fine structure of solid matter, was awarded the important Gordon Prize, $1,000 by the American Chemical Society.

Dr. Spedding uses the light which can be reflected or otherwise emitted by solids, such as rocks and minerals, to reveal what scientists call the "lattice" structure. This lattice is the spacing of atoms in the solid. By spinning the object and other antics of these tiny particles. He reads the messages of these light beams after they have been passed through a spectroscopic, a glass prism which breaks them into the rainbow and records them as vertical lines on a photographic plate.

Restrictions Attached

U.S. Secretary of Treasury Barred From Working In Bank

When Ogden W. Mills retired from the office of Secretary of the Treasury he will be free to work wherever he pleases except in a bank that is a member of the Federal Reserve System. The system includes all national banks and most of the state banks that might like to seek the services of a former Secretary of the Treasury. The Federal Reserve Act of 1913 provides that "the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency shall be ineligible during the time they are in office and for two years thereafter to hold any office, position or employment in any member bank. Appointive members of the Federal Reserve Board similarly are restricted unless they finish the term for which they are appointed.—Baltimore Sun.

Would Be Welcomed

"Down with Upping!" is to be the slogan of an association of writers, artists and publishers being formed in Paris. The object of the association is to enforce the abolition of the use in all circumstances and to replace it by salaries paid by the employer or percentages on the money taken by the employees.

Alberta's winter road clearance program involves keeping 825 miles of main traveled highway open for traffic.

Grain shipped through the port of Montreal in 1932 amounted to 112,887,703 bushels.

Where Silence Is Needed

Noisiest Place Known Is Cabin Of

Despite the great progress that has been made in aeroplane design, it has not yet been found possible to silence the noise of the engine. The cabin of an air liner is about the noisiest place in the world. It is impossible to hear oneself speak in an airplane and the only way to do it is to write down what you want to say on the writing pads provided for the purpose. Again, the air traveler will find little boxes of cotton wool in the cabin, and, if he is wise he will stuff his ears before the start of the journey and so protect himself from "engine deafness." The expert airman who do stunt flights, such as flying around the world—in just over a week, are sometimes unable to hear for several days after the conclusion of their great feats. To go to the other extreme, one of the quietest places in the world is in a sailing ship in the middle of a dead calm. There the stillness can actually be felt, and sailors often let out and sing just to break the terribly oppressive silence.

Prize Beef Sold

Brings Fifteen Cents a Pound At Calgary Stock Show

Grand champion of the baby beef show and grand champion fat beef sold under the auctioneer's hammer for 15 cents a pound at the opening here of the spring livestock show.

The grand champion bull, confined to junior breeders, was a Shorthorn, owned by George Biggar, Calgary, weighing 830 pounds. Kendall Stock Farms, Kew, Alberta, won the grand championship for fat beef of the show, junior and open classes. It weighed 1,200 pounds.

Grand champion of the Shorthorn bulls was Gold Kay, U.S., owned by University of Alberta, Woodstock, Ontario, owned by Roy Halliday, Wetaskin, was judged grand champion of the Aberdeen-Angus bulls, and W. B. Domino 114th, owned by Frank Cullison and Son, Crossfield, took the grand championship of Hereford bulls.

Showing Priceless Relics

General Bessie's Tunic Among Exhibits At McGill University

Priceless relics illustrating the important period in Canadian history, 1770-1800, will be shown at the McCord National Museum at McGill University in Montreal.

The tunic of General Sir Isaac Brock and parts of the historical attire of James McGill, founder of the university and at one time commander of the Montreal militia, are included in the exhibit.

First event illustrated in the 100 years history is the American attempt on Quebec in 1775. Then follows the burning of the parliament buildings at Montreal in 1847, and subsequent events leading up to Confederation.

Brussels Plans Exhibition

Twelve Nations Have Already Decided To Take Part

Commemorating the creation of the Belgian Congo fifty years ago and the opening of the first Belgian railroad from Brussels to Malines, Brussels has decided to have an international colonial and industrial exposition this year with Prince Leopold as honorary president.

Twelve nations already have decided to participate in the exhibition, which will cover 400 acres of ground. They are Brazil, Chile, China, Egypt, Estonia, France, Morocco, Peru, Spain, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia, and Tunisia.

Development of transportation, electricity and kindred subjects with the colonial section next in importance are the main departments.

Seeds From Many Countries

Vegetable seeds for Canadian gardens are brought from many different countries. Four tons of material seed come from Holland last year to Toronto seed house. Lettuce, beet and carrot seed comes mostly from California. Dandelion supplies cabbage and cauliflower seed.

An Amazing Device

Marvelous apparatus has been devised by Mr. Joseph Gailfiorini, operating with an eye doctor of Vienna, by which a person completely blindfolded can read a newspaper three feet away. Sight is produced by electric energy stimulating the optic nerve.

...NIGHT COLICHS

Quickly Checked and a Restful Night Assured

Just rub on VICKS VapoRub

RELIEVES COLDS WITHOUT "DOSING"

HEART OF THE NORTH

BY WILLIAM BYRON HOWES

(CBC REVIEW)

Copyright by William Byron Howes

CLARENCE VILK continued

The Inconnu patrol blew off. There was nothing Haskell could do about capturing those hands. He knew that if Williamson moved, why no move had been made, the short-handness at the post would be at least some excuse. Besides, one of the other detachment, over on Hudson's Bay or southeast in the Heindeer Lake country, would probably nab those hands and the affair would blow over.

Those rainy imprisoning days, as he sat in his cabin and looked out along the slope for a mere glimpse of Elizabeth Squadding, he was tortured by the question of why she was still there, and what stood between her and Baker. Why had Baker bought out in such hot haste and left this North country that was his home, or had they split up?

Sometimes it seemed to Haskell that his appointment to this northern post had not been a mere vagary of luck but a manifest act of destiny, that he might meet Elizabeth Squadding. His triumph over Baker, his commission as a Mounted officer, his career in the Mounted—what did the whole of it weigh against the prospect of losing Elizabeth after he had found her? With the sincerity of the only passionate love in his life, he felt that if Baker married her, she took her away, his victory over the ex-covert would be a grinning mockery.

Late one quiet evening, when Bill Hardsack was gone on patrol, Haskell saw Elizabeth go up the slope to the cabin which had been Baker's and light the candles there, and after a quarter-hour come away again. Tripping down the grassy terrace to Mrs. Drummond's flower garden, she set down alone by the edge of it.

He went out of his lonesome cabin and out along the twilight slope toward her.

Hat in hand, Haskell came up. With cold sardonic eyes she surveyed him, amused at his humility. Toward her the man had no pride left.

She remanded him sharply: "I believe I asked you not to talk with me again."

"Yes, you did," he said humbly. "I haven't forgotten. It's made these last couple weeks pretty miserable. But when I saw you over there to-night . . . Elizabeth, won't you let me—can't I stay just a little while? I got some news day before yesterday that cut me up pretty bad."

He waited for her to consent, but she said nothing. "You remember last winter I said my father was in poor health? I got a radiogram night before last about—about him."

Elizabeth understood that his father had died. She was quite well aware that Haskell was not exactly stricken by the news, though he was trying to play upon her sympathy.

She wondered why he was discussing the matter with her now.

As he went on talking of it, she began to see his reason. He mentioned the big country estate outside of Cobham, the town house in Ottawa, the extensive and valuable timber limits up the Klumik. When he hinted at himself being the only heir and the owner of all this, she saw his whole drift.

He drew her entirely cold. From his treatment of Alan she knew how tricky and dissembling he could be. He was trying to bait her. . . .

He showed his sarcasm at him for being so crude about it. Probably he thought to make her his Ottawa mistress.

The affections of such a man were evanescent at best, and certainly quickened to build upon. Imagining her relatives with this man if he ever allowed herself to become dependent on him, she saw him staving off marriage by the old threshold dodge, and at last turning coldly away when passion went. Alan Baker in time would go farther than Haskell and his Cobham estate. Alan was honest, he could be depended upon.

Agony and contemptuous she arose. "I've got to go. But there's something I really must thank you for, Inspector."

"To thank me for?" He too had risen; he was leaning toward her. "I'm glad . . . I didn't know I'd done—"

"You didn't intend it as a favor. But it was." With mocking irony in her tone he said: "Last winter Alan was offered a very splendid position in Victoria. I wanted him to take it. You used to say he was a son of a gun with prospects, and that was somewhat as I felt. He didn't want to leave. He wanted to stay in service and live here in the North. Just when he was wavering, you forced his hand. You made him buy out, and so you made our marriage possible. I'm awfully grateful to you, really. You didn't realize what a favor you were doing."

She left him standing there, staring after her, dazed and speechless.

That same evening, only an hour later, Haskell made a discovery, by starting that in some measure it took his tortured thoughts away from Elizabeth.

A knock sounded on the door, and Whipple came in with a report.

"Sir, last week I missed fifty gallons of gas and five of oil from our store. I thought it might be a paper mistake, but today I checked up again and we're short still more."

"Well, what about it?" Haskell snapped.

"Nothing, sir; nothing at all," Whipple said slyly. He saw that his chief was in a vicious mood, and he backed away to the door. "I just thought that you would like to know, sir, that some half-breed with an outboard motor is stealing this sir."

And he closed the door quietly.

Alone again, unable to bear his brooding thoughts, Haskell turned in desperation to the service radio set in an effort to distract himself. As he had done on evenings past, he picked up an Edmonton station. Among the orders, news and personal messages, he heard that an aviator named Featherfoot and another man, name unknown, had stolen a machine gun, a propeller, pack-chute, flying instruments and other things at Edmonton; and, escaping in Featherfoot's monoplane, had been sighted following the Alberta and Great Westways railroad toward McMurray. The pilot was wanted, he was in the look-out for the plane and to arrest the criminals on sight.

The name and description of Featherfoot meant nothing to Haskell, but the description of the other person made him thoughtful. Tall, rangy, sandy-haired, gray-eyed, with a long prominent scar across his left temple—that description would fit Alan Baker to a dot. And Baker had gone south, and might conceivably have reached Edmonton.

Haskell pondered this possibility a minute and then dismissed it. It was Bill Hardsack who innocently opened his eyes to the truth.

Knocking, entering, standing before the desk, he requested:

"If you don't mind, I've got three days free time coming to me, and if you don't mind I'd like to take them now. I'd like to have them in a row. If you don't mind."

"I'm short of men as it is," Haskell cut him off. "You can't go. That's that."

It wasn't "that" for Bill. Refusing to be driven out, he said humbly, "I haven't forgotten. It's made these last couple weeks pretty miserable. But when I saw you over there to-night . . . Elizabeth, won't you let me—can't I stay just a little while? I got some news day before yesterday that cut me up pretty bad."

He waited for her to consent, but she said nothing. "You remember last winter I said my father was in poor health? I got a radiogram night before last about—about him."

Elizabeth understood that his father had died. She was quite well aware that Haskell was not exactly stricken by the news, though he was trying to play upon her sympathy.

She wondered why he was discussing the matter with her now.

As he went on talking of it, she began to see his reason. He mentioned the big country estate outside of Cobham, the town house in Ottawa, the extensive and valuable timber limits up the Klumik. When he hinted at himself being the only heir and the owner of all this, she saw his whole drift.

He drew her entirely cold. From his treatment of Alan she knew how tricky and dissembling he could be. He was trying to bait her. . . .

He showed his sarcasm at him for being so crude about it. Probably he thought to make her his Ottawa mistress.

The affections of such a man were evanescent at best, and certainly quickened to build upon. Imagining her relatives with this man if he ever allowed herself to become dependent on him, she saw him staving off marriage by the old threshold dodge, and at last turning coldly away when passion went. Alan Baker in time would go farther than Haskell and his Cobham estate. Alan was honest, he could be depended upon.

Agony and contemptuous she arose. "I've got to go. But there's something I really must thank you for, Inspector."

"To thank me for?" He too had risen; he was leaning toward her. "I'm glad . . . I didn't know I'd done—"

"You didn't intend it as a favor. But it was." With mocking irony in her tone he said: "Last winter Alan was offered a very splendid position in Victoria. I wanted him to take it. You used to say he was a son of a gun with prospects, and that was somewhat as I felt. He didn't want to leave. He wanted to stay in service and live here in the North. Just when he was wavering, you forced his hand. You made him buy out, and so you made our marriage possible. I'm awfully grateful to you, really. You didn't realize what a favor you were doing."

She left him standing there, staring after her, dazed and speechless.

That same evening, only an hour later, Haskell made a discovery, by starting that in some measure it took his tortured thoughts away from Elizabeth.

A knock sounded on the door, and Whipple came in with a report.

"Sir, last week I missed fifty gallons of gas and five of oil from our store. I thought it might be a paper mistake, but today I checked up again and we're short still more."

"Well, what about it?" Haskell snapped.

"Nothing, sir; nothing at all," Whipple said slyly. He saw that his chief was in a vicious mood, and he backed away to the door. "I just thought that you would like to know, sir, that some half-breed with an outboard motor is stealing this sir."

And he closed the door quietly.

Alone again, unable to bear his brooding thoughts, Haskell turned in desperation to the service radio set in an effort to distract himself. As he had done on evenings past, he picked up an Edmonton station. Among the orders, news and personal messages, he heard that an aviator named Featherfoot and another man, name unknown, had stolen a machine gun, a propeller, pack-chute, flying instruments and other things at Edmonton; and, escaping in Featherfoot's monoplane, had been sighted following the Alberta and Great Westways railroad toward McMurray. The pilot was wanted, he was in the look-out for the plane and to arrest the criminals on sight.

The name and description of Featherfoot meant nothing to Haskell, but the description of the other person made him thoughtful. Tall, rangy, sandy-haired, gray-eyed, with a long prominent scar across his left temple—that description would fit Alan Baker to a dot. And Baker had gone south, and might conceivably have reached Edmonton.

Haskell pondered this possibility a minute and then dismissed it. It was Bill Hardsack who innocently opened his eyes to the truth.

Knocking, entering, standing before the desk, he requested:

"If you don't mind, I've got three days free time coming to me, and if you don't mind I'd like to take them now. I'd like to have them in a row. If you don't mind."

"I'm short of men as it is," Haskell cut him off. "You can't go. That's that."

It wasn't "that" for Bill. Refusing to be driven out, he said humbly, "I haven't forgotten. It's made these last couple weeks pretty miserable. But when I saw you over there to-night . . . Elizabeth, won't you let me—can't I stay just a little while? I got some news day before yesterday that cut me up pretty bad."

He waited for her to consent, but she said nothing. "You remember last winter I said my father was in poor health? I got a radiogram night before last about—about him."

Elizabeth understood that his father had died. She was quite well aware that Haskell was not exactly stricken by the news, though he was trying to play upon her sympathy.

She wondered why he was discussing the matter with her now.

As he went on talking of it, she began to see his reason. He mentioned the big country estate outside of Cobham, the town house in Ottawa, the extensive and valuable timber limits up the Klumik. When he hinted at himself being the only heir and the owner of all this, she saw his whole drift.

He drew her entirely cold. From his treatment of Alan she knew how tricky and dissembling he could be. He was trying to bait her. . . .

He showed his sarcasm at him for being so crude about it. Probably he thought to make her his Ottawa mistress.

The affections of such a man were evanescent at best, and certainly quickened to build upon. Imagining her relatives with this man if he ever allowed herself to become dependent on him, she saw him staving off marriage by the old threshold dodge, and at last turning coldly away when passion went. Alan Baker in time would go farther than Haskell and his Cobham estate. Alan was honest, he could be depended upon.

Agony and contemptuous she arose. "I've got to go. But there's something I really must thank you for, Inspector."

"To thank me for?" He too had risen; he was leaning toward her. "I'm glad . . . I didn't know I'd done—"

"You didn't intend it as a favor. But it was." With mocking irony in her tone he said: "Last winter Alan was offered a very splendid position in Victoria. I wanted him to take it. You used to say he was a son of a gun with prospects, and that was somewhat as I felt. He didn't want to leave. He wanted to stay in service and live here in the North. Just when he was wavering, you forced his hand. You made him buy out, and so you made our marriage possible. I'm awfully grateful to you, really. You didn't realize what a favor you were doing."

She left him standing there, staring after her, dazed and speechless.

That same evening, only an hour later, Haskell made a discovery, by starting that in some measure it took his tortured thoughts away from Elizabeth.

A knock sounded on the door, and Whipple came in with a report.

"Sir, last week I missed fifty gallons of gas and five of oil from our store. I thought it might be a paper mistake, but today I checked up again and we're short still more."

"Well, what about it?" Haskell snapped.

"Nothing, sir; nothing at all," Whipple said slyly. He saw that his chief was in a vicious mood, and he backed away to the door. "I just thought that you would like to know, sir, that some half-breed with an outboard motor is stealing this sir."

And he closed the door quietly.

Alone again, unable to bear his brooding thoughts, Haskell turned in desperation to the service radio set in an effort to distract himself. As he had done on evenings past, he picked up an Edmonton station. Among the orders, news and personal messages, he heard that an aviator named Featherfoot and another man, name unknown, had stolen a machine gun, a propeller, pack-chute, flying instruments and other things at Edmonton; and, escaping in Featherfoot's monoplane, had been sighted following the Alberta and Great Westways railroad toward McMurray. The pilot was wanted, he was in the look-out for the plane and to arrest the criminals on sight.

The name and description of Featherfoot meant nothing to Haskell, but the description of the other person made him thoughtful. Tall, rangy, sandy-haired, gray-eyed, with a long prominent scar across his left temple—that description would fit Alan Baker to a dot. And Baker had gone south, and might conceivably have reached Edmonton.

Haskell pondered this possibility a minute and then dismissed it. It was Bill Hardsack who innocently opened his eyes to the truth.

Knocking, entering, standing before the desk, he requested:

"If you don't mind, I've got three days free time coming to me, and if you don't mind I'd like to take them now. I'd like to have them in a row. If you don't mind."

"I'm short of men as it is," Haskell cut him off. "You can't go. That's that."

It wasn't "that" for Bill. Refusing to be driven out, he said humbly, "I haven't forgotten. It's made these last couple weeks pretty miserable. But when I saw you over there to-night . . . Elizabeth, won't you let me—can't I stay just a little while? I got some news day before yesterday that cut me up pretty bad."

He waited for her to consent, but she said nothing. "You remember last winter I said my father was in poor health? I got a radiogram night before last about—about him."

Elizabeth understood that his father had died. She was quite well aware that Haskell was not exactly stricken by the news, though he was trying to play upon her sympathy.

She wondered why he was discussing the matter with her now.

As he went on talking of it, she began to see his reason. He mentioned the big country estate outside of Cobham, the town house in Ottawa, the extensive and valuable timber limits up the Klumik. When he hinted at himself being the only heir and the owner of all this, she saw his whole drift.

He drew her entirely cold. From his treatment of Alan she knew how tricky and dissembling he could be. He was trying to bait her. . . .

He showed his sarcasm at him for being so crude about it. Probably he thought to make her his Ottawa mistress.

The affections of such a man were evanescent at best, and certainly quickened to build upon. Imagining her relatives with this man if he ever allowed herself to become dependent on him, she saw him staving off marriage by the old threshold dodge, and at last turning coldly away when passion went. Alan Baker in time would go farther than Haskell and his Cobham estate. Alan was honest, he could be depended upon.

Agony and contemptuous she arose. "I've got to go. But there's something I really must thank you for, Inspector."

"To thank me for?" He too had risen; he was leaning toward her. "I'm glad . . . I didn't know I'd done—"

"You didn't intend it as a favor. But it was." With mocking irony in her tone he said: "Last winter Alan was offered a very splendid position in Victoria. I wanted him to take it. You used to say he was a son of a gun with prospects, and that was somewhat as I felt. He didn't want to leave. He wanted to stay in service and live here in the North. Just when he was wavering, you forced his hand. You made him buy out, and so you made our marriage possible. I'm awfully grateful to you, really. You didn't realize what a favor you were doing."

She left him standing there, staring after her, dazed and speechless.

That same evening, only an hour later, Haskell made a discovery, by starting that in some measure it took his tortured thoughts away from Elizabeth.

A knock sounded on the door, and Whipple came in with a report.

"Sir, last week I missed fifty gallons of gas and five of oil from our store. I thought it might be a paper mistake, but today I checked up again and we're short still more."

"Well, what about it?" Haskell snapped.

"Nothing, sir; nothing at all," Whipple said slyly. He saw that his chief was in a vicious mood, and he backed away to the door. "I just thought that you would like to know, sir, that some half-breed with an outboard motor is stealing this sir."

And he closed the door quietly.

Alone again, unable to bear his brooding thoughts, Haskell turned in desperation to the service radio set in an effort to distract himself. As he had done on evenings past, he picked up an Edmonton station. Among the orders, news and personal messages, he heard that an aviator named Featherfoot and another man, name unknown, had stolen a machine gun, a propeller, pack-chute, flying instruments and other things at Edmonton; and, escaping in Featherfoot's monoplane, had been sighted following the Alberta and Great Westways railroad toward McMurray. The pilot was wanted, he was in the look-out for the plane and to arrest the criminals on sight.

The name and description of Featherfoot meant nothing to Haskell, but the description of the other person made him thoughtful. Tall, rangy, sandy-haired, gray-eyed, with a long prominent scar across his left temple—that description would fit Alan Baker to a dot. And Baker had gone south, and might conceivably have reached Edmonton.

Haskell pondered this possibility a minute and then dismissed it. It was Bill Hardsack who innocently opened his eyes to the truth.

Knocking, entering, standing before the desk, he requested:

"If you don't mind, I've got three days free time coming to me, and if you don't mind I'd like to take them now. I'd like to have them in a row. If you don't mind."

"I'm short of men as it is," Haskell cut him off. "You can't go. That's that."

It wasn't "that" for Bill. Refusing to be driven out, he said humbly, "I haven't forgotten. It's made these last couple weeks pretty miserable. But when I saw you over there to-night . . . Elizabeth, won't you let me—can't I stay just a little while? I got some news day before yesterday that cut me up pretty bad."

He waited for her to consent, but she said nothing. "You remember last winter I said my father was in poor health? I got a radiogram night before last about—about him."

Elizabeth understood that his father had died. She was quite well aware that Haskell was not exactly stricken by the news, though he was trying to play upon her sympathy.

She wondered why he was discussing the matter with her now.

As he went on talking of it, she began to see his reason. He mentioned the big country estate outside of Cobham, the town house in Ottawa, the extensive and valuable timber limits up the Klumik. When he hinted at himself being the only heir and the owner of all this, she saw his whole drift.

He drew her entirely cold. From his treatment of Alan she knew how tricky and dissembling he could be. He was trying to bait her. . . .

He showed his sarcasm at him for being so crude about it. Probably he thought to make her his Ottawa mistress.

The affections of such a man were evanescent at best, and certainly quickened to build upon. Imagining her relatives with this man if he ever allowed herself to become dependent on him, she saw him staving off marriage by the old threshold dodge, and at last turning coldly away when passion went. Alan Baker in time would go farther than Haskell and his Cobham estate. Alan was honest, he could be depended upon.

Agony and contemptuous she arose. "I've got to go. But there's something I really must thank you for, Inspector."

"To thank me for?" He too had risen; he was leaning toward her. "I'm glad . . . I didn't know I'd done—"

"You didn't intend it as a favor. But it was." With mocking irony in her tone he said: "Last winter Alan was offered a very splendid position in Victoria. I wanted him to take it. You used to say he was a son of a gun with prospects, and that was somewhat as I felt. He didn't want to leave. He wanted to stay in service and live here in the North. Just when he was wavering, you forced his hand. You made him buy out, and so you made our marriage possible. I'm awfully grateful to you, really. You didn't realize what a favor you were doing."

She left him standing there, staring after her, dazed and speechless.

That same evening, only an hour later, Haskell made a discovery, by starting that in some measure it took his tortured thoughts away from Elizabeth.

A knock sounded on the door, and Whipple came in with a report.

"Sir, last week I missed fifty gallons of gas and five of oil from our store. I thought it might be a paper mistake, but today I checked up again and we're short still more."

"Well, what about it?" Haskell snapped.

"Nothing, sir; nothing at all," Whipple said slyly. He saw that his chief was in a vicious mood, and he backed away to the door. "I just thought that you would like to know, sir, that some half-breed with an outboard motor is stealing this sir."

And he closed the door quietly.

Alone again, unable to bear his brooding thoughts, Haskell turned in desperation to the service radio set in an effort to distract himself. As he had done on evenings past, he picked up an Edmonton station. Among the orders, news and personal messages, he heard that an aviator named Featherfoot and another man, name unknown, had stolen a machine gun, a propeller, pack-chute, flying instruments and other things at Edmonton; and, escaping in Featherfoot's monoplane, had been sighted following the Alberta and Great Westways railroad toward McMurray. The pilot was wanted, he was in the look-out for the plane and to arrest the criminals on sight.

The name and description of Featherfoot meant nothing to Haskell, but the description of the other person made him thoughtful. Tall, rangy, sandy-haired, gray-eyed, with a long prominent scar across his left temple—that description would fit Alan Baker to a dot. And Baker had gone south, and might conceivably have reached Edmonton.

Haskell pondered this possibility a minute and then dismissed it. It was Bill Hardsack who innocently opened his eyes to the truth.

Knocking, entering, standing before the desk, he requested:

"If you don't mind, I've got three days free time coming to me, and if you don't mind I'd like to take them now. I'd like to have them in a row. If you don't mind."

"I'm short of men as it is," Haskell cut him off. "You can't go. That's that."

It wasn't "that" for Bill. Refusing to be driven out, he said humbly, "I haven't forgotten. It's made these last couple weeks pretty miserable. But when I saw you over there to-night . . . Elizabeth, won't you let me—can't I stay just a little while? I got some news day before yesterday that cut me up pretty bad."

He waited for her to consent, but she said nothing. "You remember last winter I said my father was in poor health? I got a radiogram night before last about—about him."

Elizabeth understood that his father had died. She was quite well aware that Haskell was not exactly stricken by the news, though he was trying to play upon her sympathy.

She wondered why he was discussing the matter with her now.

As he went on talking of it, she began to see his reason. He mentioned the big country estate outside of Cobham, the town house in Ottawa, the extensive and valuable timber limits up the Klumik. When he hinted at himself being the only heir and the owner of all this, she saw his whole drift.

He drew her entirely cold. From his treatment of Alan she knew how tricky and dissembling he could be. He was trying to bait her. . . .

He showed his sarcasm at him for being so crude about it. Probably he thought to make her his Ottawa mistress.

The affections of such a man were evanescent at best, and certainly quickened to build upon. Imagining her relatives with this man if he ever allowed herself to become dependent on him, she saw him staving off marriage by the old threshold dodge, and at last turning coldly away when passion went. Alan Baker in time would go farther than Haskell and his Cobham estate. Alan was honest, he could be depended upon.

Agony and contemptuous she arose. "I've got to go. But there's something I really must thank you for, Inspector."

"To thank me for?" He too had risen; he was leaning toward her. "I'm glad . . . I didn't know I'd done—"

"You didn't intend it as a favor. But it was." With mocking irony in her tone he said: "Last winter Alan was offered a very splendid position in Victoria. I wanted him to take it. You used to say he was a son of a gun with prospects, and that was somewhat as I felt. He didn't want to leave. He wanted to stay in service and live here in the North. Just when he was wavering, you forced his hand. You made him buy out, and so you made our marriage possible. I'm awfully grateful to you, really. You didn't realize what a favor you were doing."

She left him standing there, staring after her, dazed and speechless.

That same evening, only an hour later, Haskell made a discovery, by starting that in some measure it took his tortured thoughts away from Elizabeth.

A knock sounded on the door, and Whipple came in with a report.

"Sir, last week I missed fifty gallons of gas and five of oil from our store. I thought it might be a paper mistake, but today I checked up again and we're short still more."

"Well, what about it?" Haskell snapped.

"Nothing, sir; nothing at all," Whipple said slyly. He saw that his chief was in a vicious mood, and he backed away to the door. "I just thought that you would like to know, sir, that some half-breed with an outboard motor is stealing this sir."

And he closed the door

MILLER'S SPRING OPENING NUMBER

The winter was not so bad after all. We welcome spring and hope it may be the beginning of a pleasant and prosperous season. We issue this number to tell you of the large range of good goods we have to sell. We strive at all times to secure the very best goods to sell at the lowest possible prices. Best goods and best service. You are invited to call and inspect our stock. The following merchandise is offered at very attractive prices

SAT. APRIL 8 TO SAT. APRIL 22

Footwear for Men and Women

Our Shoe Department is well equipped to serve you from the little tot to the grown up.

Boy's welt Oxfords, new styles, in all sizes. Real value. Selling at

Boy's school boot, all sizes, composition sole. 2.85
A good wearing shoe. Special at 1.95
Men's genuine welt black oxford, new styles. Wear guaranteed. Per pr. 2.95
Men's welt black boot, same quality as above oxford. Per pair 3.50
Men's sturdy work boots. Good value 2.25
Men's solid leather boot made by Williams or Sterling. No. 1 quality, black or brown plain toe or cap. Per pair 2.95
Men's sport shoe, good wearing quality 1.95
Women's and growing girls' oxfords and ties. Several styles. Per pair 2.95
1 lot of straps, oxfords and ties. Odd lines. Values to $5.00. Per pair 2.60
Women's one strap Cuban heel dress shoe. Special per pair 1.70

Many lines of fine shoes in pumps, ties and straps. New spring styles at very moderate prices. Get satisfaction by having your shoes fitted properly.

Running shoes for men, women and children. All sizes in many different styles, selling at new low prices.

Wash Dresses

Wash dresses made of Printella and Magog material. Fast colors, sleeves and short sleeves. All sizes to 46. Two 79c and 1.00

Special lines selling at 1.49 1.95 and 2.95

Printella frocks, Snappy afternoon frocks in many patterns, dainty sleeves and smart neck lines. All sizes to 46 1.00 1.25 and 1.40

Three lines at Special at

Children's wash dress 1.00 1.25 and 1.40

Children's overalls, blue with red trim 60c

Men's Work Shirts and Overalls

We have a very exclusive line of good work shirts.

Men's large cut work shirt, heavy quality navy blue drill. Fast colors. All sizes 95c

Selling Special at 1.50

Men's heavy domit shirt in green or brown tone. Special at 1.50

Men's tough chambray shirt, coat style 1.50

Men's underwear, good quality, spring weight Combinations Per suit 1.25

Shirts and drawers Per garment 75c

Men's Cottonade work pants Special 1.25

Men's blue 8 oz. blue overall pants 1.45

A real fitting garment Per pair 1.45

Men's heavy M.C.L. brand, 9 oz. blue overall pant Selling Special at 1.75

Space does not permit us to quote prices on Men's Mackinaws, but you may need one for the Spring work, mightily cold some days in the fields, we have special prices for Mackinaws and Winter clothing.

GROCERIES

will not be any cheaper. Buy liberally now. Special prices in quantity lots.

5 lbs. Macaroni for	28c	Dollar Sodas	37c
Tomatoes, per tin	13c	Bulk Tea, per pound	28c
Peas, per tin	13c	Blue Ribbon Tea, per lb.	40c
Gallon tin, Dills	85c	Fresh ground Coffee, lb.	23c
Gallon tin, Catsup	75c	A.G. vacuum pack Coffee	39c
Sugar Crisp Cornflakes	9c	Holland Rusks, per pkt.	17c
4 lb. Peanut Butter (with Free sample)	65c	24 lbs. Pastry Flour	65c
2 lbs. Peanuts for	25c	Evp. Loganberries, pkt	27c
United Baking Powder, for all uses—
Last Call on Cheap Jams	42c	16 oz. tin for	23c
Plum, green or red, tin	47c	3 lb. tin for	55c
Black or Loganberry	47c	5 lb. tin for	85c
Strawberry, Gooseberry	53c

FRIDAY, APRIL 14, BEING GOOD FRIDAY

Store will be closed all day

FOR SPRING CLEANING

Spring house-cleaning is now in full swing. See us for Soaps, Soap Powders etc.	Swift's Soap Flakes, pkt.	15c
Val Kell Kleanser, tin	Savage Bleaching Water per bottle	18c
7 bars Thirtee Soap	Royal Crown Washing Powder, packet	20c
Royal Crown Lye, 2 tins	A good Broom, for	50c
2 lb. pkt. Sal Soda,	A better one, for	70c

Hosiery

Silk Hosiery are cheaper. By careful buying we offer the best values.

All silk hose, new shades. Special 65c
Penman's Cardinal brand full fashioned with French heel, Cradle foot Silk Hose 90c
Reg. 1.50 Penman's silk Hose 1.15
Very sheer Special per pair 1.15
Ladies full fashioned long wearing Rayon silk Hose. Special per pair 75c
Ladies mercerized lisle thread hose in good colors. 50c value Special 35c
Women's and children's extra heavy cotton hose plain or 2 in 1 rib Special 25c

Milinery

Mrs. Gillespie extends to you and your friends an invitation to visit her home on Second avenue where she is showing a complete stock of new Spring Hats in snappy styles and colors. These are being offered at very low and attractive prices.

Prints, Dress Muslins etc.

1 lot of odd lines of prints, some Poters in these. Special per yard 15c
1 lot Wabasso prints full 36 inches wide. Fast colors. Special per yard 20c
Wabasso prints full 36 inches wide Big range of new patterns. Per yard 25c
Plain broadcloth 36 inches wide, in many good colors. Per yard 20c
A big range of Dress muslins in fancy patterns 36 inches wide. Priced from 20c to 60c per yd. Special
A big range of Rayon fancy dress patterns. Fast colors. Regular to 60c per yard 35c
A special per yard 35c
Bath Towels size 18x36 Per pair 35c
Bath Towels size 21x45 Per pair 60c
Sheets and Pillow cases made from fine quality of Wabasso cottons. Sheets size 8x1 Special each 95c

Sheets size 9x4 Special each 1.15
Pillow cases Per pair 45c
11x14 Flannelette blankets. White or grey. Special 1.70
12x1 Flannelette blankets. White or grey. Special 2.20
Jasper blanket, a good weight double blanket suitable for summer use. Pair 1.35

Ladies Ready to Wear Dept.

You will be surprised at the big value we are offering this season in coats and dresses. New Spring coats, excellent quality and latest styles in colors of Black, and Black and white Grey, Green, Fawn, Brown and Navy in fancy Tweeds and Crepe cloths. Moderately priced from 9.50 to 20.00
15 only Rayon Canton Dresses, in new styles and colors. Selling Special 4.75
10 only Rayon Canton Crepe Dresses Odd lines. To clear at 2.95
15 only New style all silk canton and crepe dresses in plain or combination colors. Many high collar and cape style. Very Special in style and priced at 6.95
12 only Ladies fine sweaters. Blouse style. Value to 4.50. Clearing at 1.50

New Shirts for Easter

Men! A new Forsyth shirt for Easter. A large shipment of Forsyth shirts has just been received; included in the lot are the new Kennel and Country Club designs.

A good range of shirts, all new patterns. Selling at 1.50
The Country Club shirt with attached or separate collars, at 1.95
New Ties, at 65c, 1.00 and 1.50
New Dress Hats at new low prices. See us for everything in Hattershery. Men's fine broadcloth shirts with collar attached. Special each 85c

A New Spring Suit

Men's Ready to wear suits, made by Fashion Craft. 12 only in navy blue or grey. These suits sold for 32.50 to 35.00. Clearing Special per suit 18.50
5 only tweed and serge suits. Sizes 36 and 37, old values to 25.00. Clearing 10.00
Men's Doe skin windbreaker just the garment for spring wear. Special 2.20
1 lot Men's and boy's Spring weight Windbreaker. Reg. to 3.50. Special at 1.00

S. A. MILLER

OYEN, ALBERTA

PHONE 8